

Get the 'anime' look with the use of contact lenses...

If you ever came into contact with the Japanese style of animation characters, then you know that one of the main features of these figures are large, round eyes. As Japanese girls like to be trendy, some optics manufactured contact lenses that apparently increase eyes almost to the cartoon measures...

Large women's eyes, that make the rest of the face seem smaller, in the Japanese culture became a symbol of grace and sexy look. It is not surprising that girls went crazy when lenses that make eyes look larger first appeared on the market.

These lenses are actually much larger and colored, so they visually enlarge the iris of the eye. According to photographs and drawings posted on the website of the manufacturer, this product should really work.

'Anime' lenses are offered by Geo and Dueba and the prices range from 20 to 50 U.S. dollars per pair, and they also offer the option of sending a prescription by which it is possible to manufacture individual lenses. Since mostly dark colors of lenses are wanted, especially brown and black, feel free to visit and audition for a horror movie.
